Major E. J. Armstrong Speaks for the Com nonwealth and Major Holmes Conrad for the Defense-Virginia News.

LURAY, VA., April 29.-Special.-The case of the Commonwealth against E. T. Broyles was resumed in the circuit court at 9:30 A. M. to-day.

The reading of the decrees in chancery causes occupied an hour, much to the annoyance of the large number of ladies who filled the gallery.

At 10:30 A. M. Major E. J. Armstrong commenced his argument for the Commonwealth. He was twice interrupted-once by the filing into the court-room of the aged mother of the prisoner and his entire family, who occupied benches to the left of the jury, the female members kissing the prisoner as they passed his dock, and again by a man who fainted from the heat. Major Armstrong, in a decisive and able manner, went over the entire ground of the case and brought out clear-ly a number of strong points for the prosecution. His speech occupied an hour and a half, after which the court

When the sitting was resumed Major Conrad, of Winchester, made a speech of over two hours. He confined himself largely to the testimony of the doctors, and based his argument on the supposition that D. B. Snyder died from probling of the brain for the ball and not are ing of the brain for the ball and not as a result of the shot. He stated that he would not hang a cat on the testimony of the physicians who testified for the

of the prosecution.

At 7 P. M. the court adjourned until Monday at 19 o'clock A. M., when Mr. McCormick will continue the argument for the defense, and Mr. Liggett, of Harrisonburg, will conclude for the Common-

Brief History of the Crime. Following is a brief history of the Broyles-Snyder tragedy, for which the former is on trial for his life:

E. T. Broyles was a United States deputy E. T. Broyles was a United States deputy collector and D. B. Snyder an attorney. Both lived in Luray, and both were prominent Republicans. Snyder charged Broyles with being unfaithful to his party in the spring election of 1891. This led to a bitter newspaper controversy, in which Snyder denounced Broyles. The article appeared July 30, 1832, and on August 5th, following, Broyles being on the stens of 12 postofiles, and seeing August 5th, following, Broyles being on the steps of the postoffice, and seeing Snyder approximag, waited as Snyder crossed the street to the postoffice. Dr. crossed the street to the postoffice. Dr. Hudson, who was driving past the postoffice, called and gave Snyder his keys and asked him to get his mail. Snyder then started into the postoffice, and as he began to ascend the steps, of which there are four. Broyles stepped one step down, spit in Snyder's face, threw a 22-calibre revolver against his head and fired. The ball lodged just inside the temporal bone. Broyles was arrested, Dr. Hudson removed Snyder to his home, and Drs. Keller, Amiss and Brumach and Drs. Keller, Amiss and Brumach The ball was probed for, were called in. The t

but was not located.

An operation was finally determined upon, and Dr. J. Ford Thompson, of Washington, D. C., operated and removed the ball, which was just within the point of entrance. Snyder continued to improve and Boyles was balled in the sum of $2.500 and $1.000 to $2.500 to $1.000 $2,500 on August 22d.

$2,500 on August 22d.

Snyder grew worse the latter part of the month, and was taken to the Garfield Hospital, Washington, D. C., September 4th, where an exploratory operation was performed, which revealed the fact that the first operation was a suc-cers. He died September 7th, and an au-topsy was held by Dr. Lamb, of the surgeon-general's office, demonstrating that he died from progressive inflammation of the brain. Broyles was rearrested and placed in jall, where he remained for two months, when he was admitted to bail again for $1,000 in the circuit court of

Mr. P. C. H. Cabell, of the law firm of Cabell & Cabell, appeared for the Richmond and Manchester Electric Line

Richmond and Manchester Electric Line Company.

It appeared from the testimony of the Wilnesses that the boy jumped upon the rear platform of north-bound car No. 2), and upon the conductor coming out, jumped off and ran around behind the car, inomediately into the south-bound can, No. 18. The motorman at once reversel the current, and put on brakes, but the car had already struck him and pushed his body some ten or twelve feet. The testimony of the witnesses tallied exactly, and the jury, after a short deliberation, exonerated the conductor and motorman of any blame in the matter.

The boy, who is known as "Mobile," lived at 118 north Seventeenth street, and was in the employ of the Richmond lice Company.
